Singapore Visitors Choose Todd Elementary to Watch Their Math Program in Action

BRIARCLIFF MANOR — The chief executive officer of Singapore Math publisher Marshall Cavendish traveled halfway around the world recently to visit Todd Elementary School to see how the Singapore Math program is being used here in the States.

While many elementary schools in the country implement the Singapore Math program in their curriculum, Cavendish CEO Goh Sik Ngee and other members of his company selected Todd Elementary School for the visit.

“They wanted to observe a lesson using Math Buddies, our digital curriculum that is aligned with the Primary Mathematics textbooks,” said Todd Principal Nadine McDermott. Math Buddies is an online curriculum designed to support learning Math using the Singapore Mathematics approach.

“Math Buddies has the same principles as our Primary Mathematics textbooks, but it combines

Ms. McDermott said that students were excited to model Math Buddies for its creators. “We felt the visitors were impressed with the integration of this new website into a whole group lesson and independent practice,” she said. “The visit was helpful for us, as we were able to debrief to discuss the creator’s vision of the program.”
